

DHYAN VIMAL

A CALL TO CONSCIOUSLY CREATE

We are embarking on an effort that we consider a pivot point.

The effort on the Pivot Point is to play a role in humanity consciously choosing the direction they want to live out. It is an effort to wake humanity to become more conscious in the choices we make, and by that, we participate in the creations that unfold through us. I want to emphasise the word "us", not just oneself, but by us.

So the pivot point is the point that one reaches, where life changes from an accidental reality to becoming something deliberate, conscious, wilful. For too long, our fight and flight, our distress, has been used as a means to provoke us to create but that is not a creation, that is just a reaction. So humanity has been made to react, to live only in the minimal portion of existence, which is simply reacting to survival, to be part, not to be left out.

For the first time, we are undertaking; and many have tried this before, many masters have launched this, but for the first time we are really trying it globally. We are making an effort to invite people to deliberately participate in consciously shaping our own personal reality. By that we participate in consciously creating the reality of all.

Being seated in the truth of creation, in the knowledge that we gather about how creation unfolds, by understanding the personal demand to participate in oneself... we start this movement to gather many who want to be part of what we are doing.

So it is a movement to create a community of people around the world that come together in celebrating consciously creating, consciously participating, and to wake up the truth of the creator in each and every one of us. To recognise that we are creators and it is up to us to create what can be as a humanity at large. And the time is now, and this is the true effort of the friend.

There is this mythology of the past, that the era of the maitreya, the era of the friend is now. It was predicted two thousand years ago. The act of the friend is to gather others that come together to co-create, to co-participate in waking a more conscious humanity; that we create deliberately the life that can be, as a personal demand and bowing to the demand of all. What I would like to share and declare is that the work has begun.

Every one of you are invited to be a part. Maybe you can be one of the builders or just simply a supporter, simply someone who cheer what can come to be for all of us.

If you may, see whether you can dedicate some moments to come to the inner state of yes, to say, "I will wake up and be conscious, I'll wake up and wake my level of consciousness, that I will deliberately participate."

By this, one goes beyond the sin of unconsciousness, as Osho would say. One will courageously move forward to insist that life can be for all, as J. Krishnamurti would say. Together we celebrate what can come to be and by that we never enter hopelessness. We together, as a force, begin to shine as the light of transformation for humanity, lived as an individual effort, held together by many.

Just give a few minutes to see whether you can find an inner yes to be part of this.